

Fukushima earthquake and tsunami update

View this email in your browser

Those of us in Tokyo and Yokohama are OK!

The 7.3 quake happened in the northern part of the main island Honshu (that we are on) at 6 am. The news is saying that a tsunami is on its way. Its the same place that the 2011 9.0 quake hit. Very near to the nuclear power plants. We're all glued to the TV and they are monitoring the water levels closely.

Those of us in the Tokyo and Yokohama area should be ok.

We'll keep you posted but please keep Japan and the Fukushima or Tohoku area in your prayers.

Just for perspective on the distance. Its a 6hr drive from Yokohama (A) to Fukushima (B), around 300 miles. So we are pretty far away. We felt the quake here but it wasn't very strong but it was long. And when it lasts that long we know that it must be a big quake somewhere in Japan.

We're ok but please pray that God will stop the tsunami and have mercy on the people of Fukushima.
